of the "Buddha in the Attic" by Julie Otsuka. The novel tells the story of a group of Vietnamese women who arrive in the United States as refugees during the Vietnam War and are forced to find work in a New York City textile factory. Despite the challenges they face, the women form a strong bond and support each other, ultimately finding a sense of community and identity in their new home.