Migrants and Urban Change

Movement in Cities
Table of Contents

5 Introduction: Presentation of the Book

11 Immigration, Urban Change and New Directions of Social Indicators

45 Housing and Urban Regimes in Southern European Multiethnic Cities

79 Lost in Lisbon: Eastern European Immigrants Surviving on the Streets

107 Housing Policies in Lisbon and Washington D.C.: The Role of Local Actors in the Inheritance of Immigrant

117 Who Made the Change? Enduring Change in the Ethnic City

225 Individuals and Groups: Enduring Change in the Ethnic City

317 Multi-National, Multi-Cultural, and Multi-Levelled Brussels: Nbhion

500 Paul White

ISBN

Depósito Legal

978-972-636-179-4

Colibrí - Artes Gráficas, Lda.

Printed by

Neel Nark

Cover design & layout

Centro de Estudos Geográficos, University of Lisbon

Published by

Maria Luísa Fonseca

Edited by

Chies in Movement: Migrants and Urban Changes

Title

Table of Contents
Introducción

From the University of Lisbon, the authors explore the geographic and cultural implications of multi-ethnic migration and the specific characteristics of ethnic groups. Immigrant interactions are shaped by the interaction between urban systems and local achievements. Urban structures are important, but are not enough by themselves. Therefore, in various cities, we can identify groups of actors with different backgrounds and experiences that influence businesses. We can also speak of the different ways of working and realizing individual and collective goals. By the introduction of different languages, religions, and identities, immigrants can maintain and reinforce their own culture, which range of elements that serve to alter the characteristics of these places. While the characteristics of areas that receive immigrants are impacted,
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year of Immigration</th>
<th>Total Countires of Origin</th>
<th>Metropolitan Area of Washington, D.C.</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1990</td>
<td>324,746</td>
<td>12</td>
<td>3.8%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1995</td>
<td>511,978</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>2.4%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1998</td>
<td>699,059</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>2.4%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2000</td>
<td>1,041,951</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>2.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2003</td>
<td>1,420,242</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>1.7%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2006</td>
<td>1,806,292</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>1.7%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2009</td>
<td>2,191,991</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>1.7%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2012</td>
<td>2,573,912</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>1.7%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The main countries of origin of the foreign-born residents in the USA, the metropolitan area of Washington, D.C., have proportionally less Latin America, South Asia, and Western Africa than in the past. This is due to a variety of factors, including economic opportunities in the USA, the New Economy, and the region's educational and cultural offerings. are extremely varied in terms of their nature, scope and objectives. NGOs are organisations that are run by immigrants or work with them, and they are mostly fighting against immigration. Therefore, in Washington, DC’s immigration community, the most important actors are not very different from one another.

In the specific case of the Washington, DC’s immigration community, the most important actors are not very different from one another.

Washington, DC’s mobilised civil society

Source: INE, Census 2011, Table 6.0.7.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Continent</th>
<th>1991-00</th>
<th>00-01</th>
<th>2001-02</th>
<th>Change Rate</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Double nationals</td>
<td>3818</td>
<td>5135</td>
<td>810</td>
<td>3.6%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Single people</td>
<td>17527</td>
<td>21930</td>
<td>42778</td>
<td>2.3%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>17527</td>
<td>21930</td>
<td>42778</td>
<td>3.4%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Africa</td>
<td>222.2</td>
<td>49.0</td>
<td>6.0</td>
<td>2.3%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Asia</td>
<td>1500</td>
<td>1500</td>
<td>1500</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>South America</td>
<td>2.3</td>
<td>2.3</td>
<td>2.3</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Europe</td>
<td>6.4</td>
<td>6.4</td>
<td>6.4</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Africa, Asia, South America</td>
<td>489.2</td>
<td>489.2</td>
<td>489.2</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other</td>
<td>119.0</td>
<td>119.0</td>
<td>119.0</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>European Union</td>
<td>127.8</td>
<td>127.8</td>
<td>127.8</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>No.</td>
<td>1991/00</td>
<td>1991/00</td>
<td>1991/00</td>
<td>1991/00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Change rate</td>
<td>%</td>
<td>%</td>
<td>%</td>
<td>%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Excerpts and citations

According to a study by the Migration Policy Institute, the economic conditions in Europe are not very different from those in the United States, but the political and social conditions are. The transition to democracy after the collapse of the Berlin Wall in 1989/90 has been accompanied by significant economic changes, including higher rates of unemployment and lower GDP growth.

The working-age population in the European Union is estimated to be 489.2 million in 2002, compared to 127.8 million in 1991.

The growing number of immigrants is explained by a variety of factors, especially the economic situation in the United States.

The recent choice of the Washington, DC’s metro region as a place of residence for foreign workers, the existence of the Z2 program for foreign workers, and the economic situation in the United States have contributed to the growth of the working-age population in the European Union.

Table 2 - Foreign citizens living in the metropolitan area of Lisbon in 2001

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Continent</th>
<th>1991/00</th>
<th>2001</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Africa</td>
<td>12355</td>
<td>1970</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Asia</td>
<td>735</td>
<td>735</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>South America</td>
<td>48</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Europe</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>277</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other</td>
<td>17</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>European Union</td>
<td>127.8</td>
<td>15.9</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Table 2 - Foreign citizens living in the metropolitan area of Lisbon in 2001.
In the region (e.g., Georgetown University, George Washington University and in the region (e.g., Instituto del Pedado in Washington, D.C.)

Fig. 2 - Latin America Youth Center in Washington, D.C.

Fig. 1 - La Clinica del Pueblo in Washington, D.C.

There are not-for-profit institutions, like hospitals and other nonprofit organizations, that are involved in the field of health care and education. Some institutional leaders are not only knowledgeable about institutional affairs but also about the needs of the communities they serve. They are aware of the challenges faced by low-income and minority communities and work to provide services that are accessible and affordable. However, the lack of resources and funding can make it difficult to expand these services.

In Washington, D.C., private foundations are also very important, not only for providing financial support to projects proposed by various organizations but also for their role in advocating for social initiatives that address the needs of the community. They provide a platform for discussion and collaboration on issues related to health, education, and economic development.

Residents often have limited access to legal services, and the inability of those services to serve marginalized communities. In some areas, the lack of resources and funding can make it difficult to expand these services. However, some organizations are working to address these issues by providing training and support to legal professionals and by expanding access to legal services.

In conclusion, the priority of improving access to healthcare and education services for low-income and minority communities is crucial. By providing financial support and facilitating resources, private foundations can play a vital role in addressing these challenges.
Given their relative autonomy from the federal government and their emphasis on state and local services, state and local governments have been at the forefront of efforts to assist newcomers in finding a place to stay, a job, and assistance with the many legal, financial, and emotional aspects of settling in. Many state and local governments provide a variety of services to immigrant families, including legal aid, job training, educational programs, and health care. The Washington, D.C., region provides a variety of programs to assist newcomers, including education and job training programs, legal aid, and health care services.

High schools in Fairfax County, Virginia, also in Korean, Spanish, and Vietnamese.

Note: Information is available here not only in English but also in Korean, Spanish, and Vietnamese.

Fig. 3: Poster advertising the adult ESL course at Marshall

With newcomers' needs in mind, Fairfax County's Department of Health has a program that provides medical care to immigrants. The program, known as ESL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) and set up to promote multicultural education, is focused on helping the newcomer integrate into the community. The program offers classes in English as a Second Language (ESL) for adults who are new to the country, as well as job training and legal aid services.

Fig. 4: Arlington Mills Community Centre in Arlington County, Virginia.

Arlington Mills Community Centre, located in Arlington County, Virginia, serves as a resource for newcomers to the area. The center offers a variety of programs and services, including job training, legal aid, and health care. The center is an important resource for newcomers, providing a place to connect with others and learn about life in the United States.

Due to its relevance in the political and financial aspects of life, the U.S. government has made efforts to ensure that immigrants are provided with adequate services and support. The Department of Homeland Security has implemented programs to assist immigrants in finding employment, accessing education, and securing housing. These programs aim to help immigrants integrate into society and become productive members of the community.

Fig. 5: Poster advertising the adult ESL course at Marshall

With newcomers' needs in mind, Fairfax County's Department of Health has a program that provides medical care to immigrants. The program, known as ESL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) and set up to promote multicultural education, is focused on helping the newcomer integrate into the community. The program offers classes in English as a Second Language (ESL) for adults who are new to the country, as well as job training and legal aid services.

Fig. 4: Arlington Mills Community Centre in Arlington County, Virginia.

Arlington Mills Community Centre, located in Arlington County, Virginia, serves as a resource for newcomers to the area. The center offers a variety of programs and services, including job training, legal aid, and health care. The center is an important resource for newcomers, providing a place to connect with others and learn about life in the United States.

Due to its relevance in the political and financial aspects of life, the U.S. government has made efforts to ensure that immigrants are provided with adequate services and support. The Department of Homeland Security has implemented programs to assist immigrants in finding employment, accessing education, and securing housing. These programs aim to help immigrants integrate into society and become productive members of the community.

Fig. 5: Poster advertising the adult ESL course at Marshall

With newcomers' needs in mind, Fairfax County's Department of Health has a program that provides medical care to immigrants. The program, known as ESL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) and set up to promote multicultural education, is focused on helping the newcomer integrate into the community. The program offers classes in English as a Second Language (ESL) for adults who are new to the country, as well as job training and legal aid services.

Fig. 4: Arlington Mills Community Centre in Arlington County, Virginia.

Arlington Mills Community Centre, located in Arlington County, Virginia, serves as a resource for newcomers to the area. The center offers a variety of programs and services, including job training, legal aid, and health care. The center is an important resource for newcomers, providing a place to connect with others and learn about life in the United States.

Due to its relevance in the political and financial aspects of life, the U.S. government has made efforts to ensure that immigrants are provided with adequate services and support. The Department of Homeland Security has implemented programs to assist immigrants in finding employment, accessing education, and securing housing. These programs aim to help immigrants integrate into society and become productive members of the community.
Offices by associations also serve educational, cultural, and social functions such as peer counseling, support groups, and information dissemination. The Lisbon Metropolitan Council of Immigrant Communities and Ethnic Minorities was established in 1994, and the Ministry of Immigration, Citizenship, and Communities was created in 1999.

In recent years, the Lisbon Metropolitan Council of Immigrant Communities and Ethnic Minorities has been active in promoting social inclusion and promoting the rights and interests of immigrants and ethnic minorities. The council works to promote the social and cultural cohesion of the community, to promote the integration of immigrants and ethnic minorities into the local society, and to promote the participation of immigrants and ethnic minorities in the political and social life of the community.

The Lisbon Metropolitan Council of Immigrant Communities and Ethnic Minorities also works to promote the economic development of the community, to support the creation of jobs and the development of businesses, and to promote the cultural and social diversity of the community. The council also works to promote the participation of immigrants and ethnic minorities in the cultural and social life of the community, and to promote the integration of immigrants and ethnic minorities into the local society.
The Catholic Church plays a particularly important role in the range of services provided to children in the case of Washington, D.C., and Lisbon. One of the main differences between the two cases is Washington's focus on HTML, as compared to Lisbon's focus on practical solutions. The Catholic Church in Lisbon has made great efforts to open its doors to children, offering a wide range of educational, cultural, and social services. Similarly, in Washington, D.C., the Catholic Church is involved in various initiatives aimed at providing support to children, including educational programs, social services, and cultural activities.

In Washington, D.C., the neighborhood of Adams Morgan is a key area, with the Washington Post Publishing Company located nearby. The church's presence in this area is significant, as it provides a variety of resources and support to the community. The Catholic Church in Lisbon also plays a vital role in the city's cultural and social life, offering programs and services that cater to the needs of children and families.

In conclusion, both Washington, D.C., and Lisbon are characterized by a strong presence of the Catholic Church in their communities. The church's role in providing support to children, through various initiatives and programs, is an important aspect of the city's social fabric. These efforts highlight the church's commitment to serving the community and ensuring that children have access to the resources and support they need to thrive.
Patients, other health care providers, and social service agencies often are unaware of the comprehensive services available to address and model the needs of immigrant patients with limited English proficiency. These services may include language interpretation, cultural competency training, and assistance with navigating the health care system. By promoting awareness of these services, professionals can help ensure that immigrant patients receive the care they need.

The benefits of providing these services to immigrant patients include improved health outcomes, increased patient satisfaction, and reduced health care costs. Additionally, providing these services can help build trust between health care providers and immigrant communities, leading to better health outcomes for all.

To improve access to care for immigrant patients, it is important to address the challenges they may face in navigating the health care system. This includes providing language interpretation services, cultural competency training, and other support services. By working together, health care providers, social service agencies, and community organizations can help ensure that immigrant patients receive the care they need.

References:

The challenge is to another challenge they must overcome in the future.

NGO refers to their great regional development on government's general awareness of immigrants' rights and obligations.